I am Trini Suryowati, representing other authors from Faculty of Medicine, Universitas Kristen Indonesia.
We have completed a scientific article entitled "Bioactive Compounds, Antidiabetic and Antimicrobial Potential of Pinang Seeds Extract (Areca Catechu I)."

We hope this article can be published in the JIKA because exciting findings in the scientific report can become new treasures in science, especially in health sciences.
We are willing to go through the review process following JIKA standards.

Editor and reviewer comments:

Reviewer #1:

- Clarity of Objectives and Scope: The abstract mentions investigating biologically active compounds in seeds, fruits, and leaves of Pinang. Clarify the specific objectives and scope of the study in relation to antidiabetic and antimicrobial properties. This will provide a clearer roadmap for readers.
- Introduction Enhancement: Expand the introduction to provide more context on the global prevalence of diabetes and the relevance of exploring indigenous plants like Pinang. This will help readers understand the broader significance of the study.
- Chemical Compound Identification: In the methods section, elaborate on the chemical compounds identified in Pinang seeds using GC-MS. Provide a comprehensive list and discuss the potential health benefits of each compound, linking them to relevant literature.
- Statistical Significance: Add statistical measures to support the reported values, especially in the inhibition of α -glucosidase. Include standard deviations or confidence intervals to enhance the reliability of the results.
- Comparative Analysis: Compare the α -glucosidase inhibitory effect of Pinang seeds with other known antidiabetic agents. This will help readers gauge the potency of Pinang seeds in a broader context.

I hope you can make improvements as soon as possible and send the revised article again via this email.
