Editor and reviewer comments:

Reviewer #1:

1. The abstract provides a general overview of the topic, but it could benefit from a more focused and concise introduction. Consider briefly mentioning the significance of the issue and the methodology used in the study to engage the reader's interest.
2. It would be helpful to include a brief section describing the research methodology used in the study. What specific sources were reviewed, and how were they selected? This would provide readers with a clearer understanding of the study's approach.
3. Ensure that you follow proper citation and referencing guidelines throughout the article. Mention specific trusted sources or studies that the findings are based on, which can increase the credibility of the research.
4. The findings mentioned in the abstract are somewhat generalized. Consider providing more specific details or examples to illustrate how students can access reliable information and follow safety instructions effectively. This would make the recommendations more actionable.
5. While the chosen keywords are relevant, it might be beneficial to include additional keywords that are commonly used in the field of public health, psychology, or anxiety management related to COVID-19. This can help increase the discoverability of your article.

I hope you can make improvements as soon as possible and send the revised article again via this email.

Dear

Lamhot Naibaho, et al.
Universitas Kristen Indonesia, Jakarta, Indonesia

Thank you for the team's efforts to make improvements to the article.
Based on the reviewers' considerations, the article has, at some point, increased.
However, the team has to improve on a few more points. Hopefully team are willing to do it.

Please follow the following revision instructions:
#Reviewer 2:

1. The abstract mentions that the study was conducted at Universitas Kristen Indonesia, but it would be valuable to specify the scope and size of the study. Were there any limitations in terms of the sample size or diversity of students included in the research? Providing this information can help readers better understand the study's applicability and potential limitations.
2. It would be beneficial to include a section in the abstract that highlights the practical implications and recommendations for educators, policymakers, and healthcare providers. How can the findings be applied to support students' anxiety management effectively during the COVID-19 pandemic?
3. While the abstract is generally clear, consider using more academic language and terminology appropriate for a scholarly journal. This will enhance the professionalism and academic rigor of the article.
4. When discussing finding and understanding scientific information, it is essential to emphasize the importance of transparency in information sources. Mention the significance of peer-reviewed articles, academic journals, and government health websites as trusted sources to ensure accuracy and credibility.
5. If the study included any statistical data or surveys, consider including a brief summary of key statistical findings or trends in the abstract. This can provide a more data-driven perspective and encourage readers to explore the article further for in-depth analysis.

Articles that have been revised and please send them back via this email.
