Editor and reviewer comments:

Reviewer #1:

1. The abstract is generally clear, but it would benefit from a more structured approach. Consider breaking it down into distinct sections such as 'Background,' 'Methodology,' 'Findings,' and 'Conclusion' to make it easier for readers to follow the research's progression.
2. While you mention using a qualitative research design, the abstract lacks details about the research methodology and data collection process. It would be beneficial to briefly describe how the legal counseling activities were conducted, including the number of participants, the selection process, and the criteria for measuring community legal awareness.
3. The abstract should briefly touch on the key findings or insights obtained from the research. Providing a summary of the most significant results will give readers a better understanding of the study's implications. For example, you could mention specific changes in community legal awareness levels.
4. The keywords "Community Legal Awareness," "Land Right," and "Disputes" are relevant, but "Enhancing" is quite generic. It would be advisable to replace it with a more specific keyword that reflects the primary focus of the study, such as "Legal Aid Institutions" or "Qualitative Research."
5. Ensure that you include proper citations and references in your journal article. This will strengthen the credibility of your research. Mention any key sources that influenced the study or are relevant to the topic of enhancing community legal awareness.

I hope you can make improvements as soon as possible and send the revised article again via this email.

Dear

Lamhot Naibaho, et al.
Universitas Kristen Indonesia, Jakarta. Indonesia

Thank you for the team's efforts to make improvements to the article.
Based on the reviewers' considerations, the article has, at some point, increased.
However, the team has to improve on a few more points. Hopefully team are willing to do it.

Please follow the following revision instructions:

#Reviewer 2:

1. In the abstract, you mention using observation and checklist sheets as instruments for data collection. It's essential to discuss the validation and reliability of these instruments. How were they developed, and were they pretested for accuracy and consistency in measuring community legal awareness?
2. The abstract briefly mentions that the research was conducted in Bolaangmongondow Regency, Kotamabagu North Sulawesi, but it could benefit from a brief contextual introduction. Explain why this location was chosen and how it relates to the broader issue of land rights disputes and legal awareness in Indonesia or the region.
3. The abstract lacks a section discussing the practical implications of the research and any recommendations for policy or further studies. Providing some insights into how the enhanced community legal awareness might lead to positive changes or suggestions for future actions would strengthen the abstract.
4. Although you describe the research as qualitative, it appears that some quantitative elements, such as the number of participants or data points, are involved. Clarify if any quantitative data was collected and, if so, provide a brief summary of these statistics, which may add depth to your findings.
5. Ensure that the language used in the abstract is precise and free from grammatical errors. A clear, well-structured, and grammatically sound abstract is crucial for conveying professionalism and ensuring the research is easily understood by a wide audience.

Articles that have been revised and please send them back via this email.
