I have completed a scientific article entitled "Female and Males' Brain Tendencies in Learning English as a Second Language."

I hope this article can be published in the GRANTHAALAYAH because exciting findings in the scientific report can become new treasures in science, especially in education sciences.

I am willing to go through the review process following GRANTHAALAYAH standards.

Editor and reviewer comments:

Reviewer:

- 1. Clarity in Objectives and Methods: The abstract lacks clarity regarding the specific objectives of the research and the methods used. Provide a concise statement of the research objectives and a brief overview of the research methodology to enhance clarity.
- 2. Specify Research Design: It would be beneficial to explicitly mention the research design employed in the study. Specify whether it was a cross-sectional, longitudinal, or experimental design to give readers a clearer understanding of the study's structure.
- 3. Enhance Literature Review: The literature review section seems brief. Consider expanding on existing literature related to brain tendencies in language learning, incorporating recent studies to strengthen the theoretical foundation of your research.
- 4. Methodological Transparency: Improve methodological transparency by detailing the criteria used for selecting literature from Pubmed, Google Scholar, Research Gate, and other online sources. This will help readers assess the reliability of your data sources.
- 5. Clarify Brain Hemisphere Impact: The statement "learning achievement is not influenced by the competence of the right or left brain" is ambiguous. Elaborate on the specific impact, if any, that each hemisphere has on language learning to avoid potential misinterpretation.
- 6. Elaborate on Brain Structure: Provide a more in-depth discussion on how understanding the brain's structure, as facilitated by the left and right hemispheres, contributes to improving students' mastery of subjects. Offer specific examples or mechanisms involved.
- 7. Strengthen Conclusion: The conclusion could be strengthened by summarizing key findings and their implications more explicitly. Clearly articulate the practical implications of the research for educators and language learners.

8. Refinement of Keywords: Consider refining the keywords for better searchability. For instance, use specific terms like "neuroeducation" or "brain lateralization" in addition to the current keywords for a more comprehensive representation.
9. Grammar and Language Precision: Some sentences in the abstract are lengthy and complex. Break them down for clarity. Additionally, ensure precision in language usage throughout the abstract to enhance overall readability.
10. Incorporate Limitations: It would be beneficial to include a section discussing the limitations of the study. Acknowledging potential constraints adds transparency and strengthens the overall integrity of the research.

I hope you can make improvements as soon as possible and send the revised article again via this email.
