Editor and reviewer comments:

Reviewer:

1. The title is broad; consider refining it to reflect the specific focus of the study, such as "Effective Strategies for Classroom Management Amidst the COVID-19 Pandemic."
2. Clarify the specific research question or gap addressed by the study to provide a more precise context. Elaborate on the library research methodology; include details on the criteria used for document selection. Specify the types of documents analyzed (journals, books, articles) and their respective contributions to the study.
3. Provide a detailed explanation of how the researchers served as instruments in the library research. Include the rationale behind the three-month timeframe (February – April 2021) and its relevance to the study's objectives. Consider providing information on the number and sources of documents reviewed.
4. Strengthen the literature review by including more recent and relevant studies related to classroom management during the COVID-19 pandemic. Discuss any conflicting findings in the existing literature and how your study addresses or contributes to these discrepancies.
5. Present more specific findings from the document analysis; include examples or cases that highlight the principles of transparency and professionalism. Consider using visual aids, such as tables or charts, to enhance the presentation of results.
6. Connect the study's findings to existing theories on classroom management and leadership during crises. Discuss the practical implications of the results for educators, administrators, and policymakers. Acknowledge any limitations in the study and suggest avenues for future research.
7. Summarize the key contributions of the study more explicitly. Reiterate the significance of the findings in the broader context of educational management during the COVID-19 pandemic.
8. Provide concrete recommendations for educators, administrators, and policymakers based on the study's findings. Highlight actionable steps for implementing transparency and professionalism in school management during a pandemic.

9. Ensure the use of precise and clear language throughout the article. Check for consistency in terminology and phrasing.
10. Consider adding more specific keywords related to the study's focus, such as "remote learning," "online education," or "crisis leadership."

I hope you can make improvements as soon as possible and send the revised article again via this email.
