Editor and reviewer comments:

Reviewer:

1. Title Clarity: The title is clear and directly conveys the focus of the study. Consider adding specificity, such as the specific challenges faced by students in reading and writing.
2. Methodology Precision: Clarify the specific survey design used in the quantitative study. Provide details on the questionnaire's content and how it effectively gauges reading and writing difficulties.
3. Sample Size Concerns: Please elaborate on the rationale behind selecting 80 students for the survey. Consider discussing whether this sample size is representative of the larger student population.
4. Data Analysis Software: The abstract mentions SPSS 7.5 for data analysis. Ensure accuracy in the software version, and briefly describe how SPSS facilitated the analysis of students' responses.
5. Impact on Other Skills: The statement regarding the impact of reading and writing weaknesses on other language skills is intriguing. Expand on this point by providing specific examples or citing relevant literature to support this claim.
6. Lecturer's Role Clarification: Elaborate on how lecturers' abilities and creativity were assessed. Were there specific criteria, and how did these factors influence students' perceptions and awareness?
7. Collaboration Implications: The conclusion suggests collaboration involving school management. Provide more details on the proposed strategies for building a conducive school climate and a safe environment to motivate students.
8. Motivation and Learning: Discuss in more detail how a motivated student body contributes to effective learning. Provide examples or refer to existing studies that support the relationship between motivation and academic success.
9. Recommendations for Future Research: Consider including a section on recommendations for future research. This could involve exploring specific teaching methodologies or interventions to address identified difficulties.

10. Keywords Suitability: Ensure that the selected keywords effectively represent the core themes of the study. Consider adding more specific terms that relate to the nuances of reading and writing challenges in an English learning context.

I hope you can make improvements as soon as possible and send the revised article again via this email.
