Picture Fuzzy Set

Including more possible types of uncertainty, Cuong [5] defined picture fuzzy set (PFS) in 2014 generalizing the concepts of fuzzy set and intuitionistic fuzzy set.

Definition

Let X be the universe. Then a PFS A is defined on X as $A = \{r, (\mu_A(r), \eta_A(r), \nu_A(r)) : r \in X\}$, where $\mu_A(r), \eta_A(r), \nu_A(r) \in [0, 1]$ denote the degree of truth membership (DTMS), degree of abstention membership (DAMS), degree of false membership (DFMS) of $r \in A$, respectively with $0 \leq \mu_A(r) + \eta_A(r) + \nu_A(r) \leq 1 \forall r \in X$. Also $\forall r \in X, D_A(r) = 1 - (\mu_A(r) + \eta_A(r) + \nu_A(r))$ represent denial degree of $r \in A$. Here, $\mu_A(r), \eta_A(r), \nu_A(r)$ all are independent.

Giriş (Introduction)

Biriki - toprak sistemine Yağış (P) ile giren su miktarı kazanc olarak ifade edilmektedir. Yüzeysel akış (R), sızma (D_s) ve evapotranspirasyon (ET) ile sistemden çıkan su miktarları ise kayıp olarak ifade edilmektedir. Sisteme giren (kazanc) ve çıkan (kayıp) su miktarlarının eşitliğinden yararlanılarak ET en doğru şekilde belirlenebilmektedir (Eşitlik 1). P ve D_s parametreleri sırasıyla pluviyometre (Şekil 2) ve lizimetre (Şekil 3) kullanılarak ölçülebilmektedir. R ise yüzeysel akış karsaytlarına dayalı bazı empirik yöntemler kullanılarak tahmin edilebilmektedir. Fakat bu ölçme ve tahmin işlemleri çok zor ve zaman alıcı olmaktadır.

Bu nedenle daha kolay ölçülebilen veya tahmin edilebilen parametreler olan hava sıcaklığı (T), oransal nem (RH), solar radyasyon (R_s) ve rüzgar hızına (U₂) dayalı empirik yöntemler kullanılarak ET miktarının tahmin edilmesi yolu pratikte daha çok tercih edilmektedir.

$$P - R + D_s + ET$$

$$ET = P - (R + D_s) \quad (1)$$

The amount of water entering the plant - soil system with precipitation (P) is expressed as gain. The amount of water leaving the system with surface runoff (R), infiltration (D_s) and evapotranspiration (ET) are expressed as loss. ET can be determined most accurately by utilizing the equality of the amount of water entering (gain) and leaving (loss) water in the system (Equation 1). The P and D_s parameters can be measured using the pluviometer (Figure 2) and lysimeter (Figure 3), respectively. R can be estimated using some empirical methods based on surface runoff coefficients. However, these measurement and estimation processes are very difficult and time consuming.

Therefore, in practice, it is more preferred to estimate the amount of ET using empirical methods based on air temperature (T), relative humidity (RH), solar radiation (R_s) and wind speed (U₂), which are more easily measurable or available parameters.

ÖZET

Bu çalışma, Endonezya'da demokrasinin hayati bir yönü olan Genel Seçimlere Siyasi Katılımdaki (PEMILU) yolsuzluğu analiz etmektedir. Seçimler, vatandaşların seçimlerde oy kullanmalarını sağlayan ve günlük hayatlarını yönlendiren kararları etkilemelerini sağlayan bir araçtır. Ancak Endonezya'da uygulama tersine dönmüş, seçilme ve oy kullanma hakları gasp edilmiş ve bu katılım hem Medeni ve Siyasi Haklar Sözleşmesi'nde hem de Genel Seçimler Yasası'nda düzenlenen asgari insan hakları standartlarını uygulamamaktadır. POLITICAL FRAUD OF ELECTION IN INDONESIA: A HUMAN RIGHTS
PERSPECTIVE*ABSTRACT

This study analyzes fraud in Political Participation in General Elections (PEMILU), which is a vital aspect of democracy in Indonesia. Elections are a means that enable citizens to cast their votes in elections and influence the decisions that govern their daily lives. However, the implementation is reversed in Indonesia, the rights to be elected and to vote are hijacked and frauded. Participation does not apply the minimum standards of human rights regulated both in the Convention on Civil and Political Rights and the Law on General Elections. The author uses secondary data from reliable sources, and uses a content approach in analyzing the data. The author says that equality and human rights laws must apply and operate during the election period.

Keywords: political rights; participation; voting rights

BACKGROUND

The inclusion of national election in the basic Law crafted Indonesia, alongside the India and the United States among the most representative democracy nations in the world. This has already been indicated in each and every national election throughout Indonesia. Numerous independent oversight groups and foreign experts wish to see how Indonesia's national election, from the actors and procedures which may intensify democratic values, continues to unfold witnessed first hand. The Unitarist State of the Republic of Indonesia is indeed a nation with such a democratically elected government wherein "by people and for the people" is indeed a symbolic representation of Indonesia's democratic government. It is an universal right that protects people as well as other civic groups from marginalization and discrimination (Lee & Sun, 2018; United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, 2022).

In a democratic governance, general electoral fraud (PEMILU) has always been outlawed. This is due to its possibilities to denude citizens' right to vote and then provide misleading information in election results. Citizens do not participate in the democratic process by not voting in the election or by replacing voters with ghost voters.

Even though Indonesia claims among the largest democratic nations and made impressive democratic gain (Freedom House, 2022), such an accomplishment seems to be subject to debate since buying votes persists to tarnish its election system (Virananda, Dartarto & Wijaya, 2021; Al-Hamdi et al., 2021; Jaffrey, 2020; Muhtadi, 2019; Aspinall et al, 2017). Money politics and political fraud are still prevalent in Indonesian politics (Al-Hamdi, 2022; Kramer, 2022; Jannah et al., 2020; Berenschot, 2018). Political parties continue to rely on political donations to win an election (Hidayaturrahman, Ngarawula & Sadhana, 2022; Dinarto & Ng, 2021; Jannah et al., 2020).

Identity politics, populism, as well as polarization are also employed to undermine political opponents in order to gain votes in elections (Habibi, 2022; Prasetyawan, 2022; Kansong, Sunarwinadi & Triputra, 2022; Rakhmani & Saraswati, 2021; Afrimadona, 2021; Fossati, 2019; Hofmann et al., 2021). Another popular method for improving voting rolls in Indonesian election campaigns would be "ghost voter" politics (LIPI, 2013; Mildaniati, 2022). The ghost politics of casting a vote has been practiced by utilizing the identity of the dead person in the voting rolls to boost the voting rolls of particular candidates.

Based on the information provided above, this research focused on such new issue. Researchers are attempting to respond to two fundamental questions. Are Indonesian voting truly democratic? Second, how does political scam affect voters' political representation as component of their civil rights? To the first issue, the writer states no, but that it is a pseudo-democracy. The second claim is that vote buying, populism, and ghost voters damage voters' democratic freedom since they are not conducted in accordance with the principle of direct, general, free, as well as confidential elections.. Despite this, Indonesia is a democratic country with limited legal access to the voting process, the use of a ghost ballot, and low levels of civic engagement. Indonesia's electoral system was either magnificent or tarnished by fraud.

LITERATURE REVIEW

Electoral system

The electoral system is the representation of democratic governance, and it is crucial for the stability of a nation 's development (OCHCR, 2022). According to Huntington (1995), the Electorate must have 5 elements within the successful execution:

1. The embodiment of folk's autonomy is put into practice.
2. Serving as a way of creating as well as formulating representation in government.
3. To serve as a means for lawfully instituting a leadership change.
4. To function as a system that permits elected elites to gain credibility. Voting in an election gives the elected leaders a mandate from the people to run the "wheels of government.
5. To serve as a system of general civic engagement which vigorously defines general populace guideline.

Election process in Indonesia are ruled by Law Number 7 of 2017. The meaning of Voting is found in Article 1 number 1 of the Law. General Elections, also known as elections, are indeed a mechanism of exercising people's sovereign power by electing members of the People's Representative Council, members of the Regional Representatives Council, the President and Vice President, and members of the Regional People's Representative Council in the Unitary State of the Republic of Indonesia based on Pancasila and the 1945 Constitution.

Political fraud

Political fraud has long been a source of contention among academics (Virananda, Dartarto & Wijaya, 2021; Al-Hamdi et al., 2021; Jaffrey, 2020; Al-Hamdi, 2022; Kramer, 2022; Jannah et al., 2020; Berenschot, 2018; Muhtadi, 2019; Aspinall et al, 2017). Meanwhile, the characteristics of an ideal election cycle include that the voting process must be transparent, non-partisan, and free from political fraud from before the election to after the election results..

According to the Human Rights Office of the High Commissioner (2022), real polling places must meet certain criteria, such as openness, voting chance, full participation, informed comprehension, or schedule regulation. The above representative democracy pattern suggests widespread equality and equal and fair rights for any and all people in the voting sphere. Stokes (1999), the democratic process is characterized by a 'one person, one vote' scheme wherein people have the chance to choose any of the political elites trying to compete for ballots. Even though social networking may be an effective political device, it has the potential to raid liberty as well as decapitate democratic values.

According to Lee (2018), the era of technology (information) puts us within extremely distinct contexts, and people live in a time which is influenced by forgery instead of open mindedness. Lee (2018), tricksters propagandize as well as diminish major parties' or pols' legitimacy with in political sphere. Subterfuge promotions as well as foreign meddling mechanisms infrequently depend entirely on online advertisement; some who have employed deceiving front clusters, frauds social media platform records, internet search techniques, and automated tools to deceive conversations online, among numerous other techniques. Many roadblocks to a global network global ecosystem have been strongly intertwined, and lawmakers must respond to issues throughout a variety of actions. Those who had already created digital marketing devices to easily available functionality. Even before political operatives delegitimize promotional innovation, the few who employ it to identify weaknesses in which both individuals and organizations are the most susceptible to uses a specially will gain. Individual citizens' data is employed against eachother in these kind of situations, and it is employed to aid ideological advertising companies in positively influencing one's targets. Such democratic deception is a human rights infringement.

Political forgery in election process affects the degree of political turmoil because of practice of 'political unrest' is one of government's basic ideas. Political fraud is a form of electoral violence which includes attempting to alter the outcome and process of an electoral cycle, normally shortly before the election. For political analysts, the idea that politicians experience unpredictability as a result of data trickery is intriguing since attempting to manipulate dynamic generation its electoral discourse.

According to Reynolds (2002), voting processes seem to be institutional arrangements for political decisions wherein individuals have the prerogative to choose through a competition for people's voter base. The rise of perceived risks linked to significant political unrest can also have two implications for investment plan. First, political uncertainty tends to raise the potential risk of foreign funds, resulting in a greater equity expense. Second, electoral unpredictable nature tends to increase management's impression of a fund's operating cash risk, because individual firms' cash flow seems to be vulnerable both to perplexing and aggregation mysteries. As a consequence, all through periods of intense political strife, there is an proclivity to perceive financial inadequacies and to push an outside market share, causing a higher equity cost..

Methodology

This research employed a descriptive qualitative method to investigate interpersonal interactions, mechanisms, as well as activities whilst also used over data on the issue at hand. This article evaluates how well the Indonesian electoral system utilizes social media to control information. This research aims to collect further data and paint a more complex image of political fraud throughout Indonesia's polls. The author performed empirical research is based on vote data using a sequence of series of documentaries bibliography as well as appropriate documents. The writer eviscerated the problems using the other electoral deception through data processing and civil rights theories. In regards to theoretical as well as intellectually rigorous significant contribution, the said article offers a valuable comprehension of analysis of political fraud and also its implications both on contestants' as well as voters' casting a ballot liberties.

Analyses

A powerful democratic clientelism connection between voting organizing committee, nominees, as well as constituents thru the cast a ballot choices becomes a form of electoral fraud in Indonesian voting. Clientelism is a special provision from accomplishment for self gratification or mutual assistance of power and sharing of relationships, as well as unfairness should be considered acceptable.

Pork Barrel and Money Politics

In the Indonesia electoral practice, cast a ballot tactics including such donating cash to constituents (money politics) and misappropriating government funds to purchase votes (Pork Barrel) seem to be prevalent (LIPI, 2010; Jati, 2013; Saragintan & Hidayat, 2016; Aspinall & Sukmajati, 2016; Broto et al., 2021; Tjahjoko, 2022). Vote buying and favoritism are two factors which commonly appear in Indonesian election process as they can impact voting choices to advantage candidates who use this strategy winning elections. Vote buying is one of the greatest opponents of each and every democratic establishment in Indonesia, either national and local. Vote buying refers to the act of buying electors votes by election attendees as well as by the winning squad, regardless of whether representative or otherwise, typically before the vote. Voters forfeit his\her independency when this relates to selecting nominees for elected figures based on reasonable considerations including proven record, achievement, initiatives, and manifesto pledges when it relates to money politics. This form of vote buying has always been typically regulated by legislation, such as the Pilkada Law (Electoral Law).

Before the national election, propagandists, functionaries, and even political apparatchiks buy influence. This promotes the practice of vote buying through distributing cash, basic necessities, grains, oil, and sugar to the general populace in order to garner general support for the politicians of party concerned. Vote buying emerged as a consequence of fear and mistrust with in capacity of contestants as well as successful teams to win in a honest fashion. Troubles arise as a consequence of difficulties with in new recruits of elected figures. The said hiring process, which really is agnostic to ability and past record, generates incredibly quick nominees who are incapable of arouse electorate compassion or empathy.

A further method for influencing its voting process thru the transaction - oriented elections is to employ the corporation fund to purchase people to vote. According to figures released by the Corruption Eradication Commission (KPK), as cited by Widayati (2019), the KPK seized 400 thousand packets in 84 cartons totaling IDR 8 billion. Something allegedly planned to use the funds for election day attacks. 'BSP (initial) is suspected of accepting a bribe from A.W. (accused), Marketing Director of P.T. Humpuss Transportation Kimia (HTK company). The accused has been supposed to help P.T. HTK in negotiating a deal to utilize its ships for fertilizer allocation from P.T. Indonesian Logistics Fertiliser. Other money politics cases captured by the police during the 2019 electoral campaign include IDR 1,075 billion. in cash and property from one political group in Lamongan, East Java.

Regardless of the fact that purchasing and selling votes is widespread in Indonesia, its impact on electoral results seems to be negligible. That technique of purchasing and selling franchises tends to affect only around 11% of all total votes. Three of culprits, for example, conceded to distributing a cash to 2,400 people. The amount of cash to be dispersed is IDR 20,000 (US$ 1 36) per individual. According to Kefer (2007), electors of IDR 20.000 have such a connection to poverty and their financial circumstance. Constituents of low-income practice cronyism and corruption as well as manipulate people to vote from these connections.

Populism in Indonesian Politics

Populism have been prevalent in recent Indonesian elections, both locally and nationally. Since the 2014 to 2019 election, the algorithmic campaign has indeed been uncommon in comparison to certain other centralized democratic nations. On voting days, populism is employed in order rally large numbers of potential voters. Moreover, populism regularly perpetuates religious doctrine strain through associating an electoral opposing player with such a minority. In addition, religious as well as ethnic background are commonly used as a cast a ballot generator for nominees. As a result, cross-cutting cleavages based on religion and place of origin can be very political. Furthermore, identities associated to religious divergences motivate and inspire larger groups into sensible coalitions with political figures. Such midriff trends influence the way individuals cast a ballot. The above polarizability could correspond to a corruption and nepotism platform, and yet identity coincides it (Habibi, 2022).

Populism is a concern in a state as diversified as Indonesia for three main reasons listed below. First, populism does have the potential to reduce or perhaps even completely remove those certain personas throughout societal structure (Jannah, Ikhwan & Maritza, 2020). Identities are much more complex and diverse in a collective of individuals within a community, a neighborhood, or even a nation. Politicians intentionally display an individuality which those who genuinely think would then convince people to vote for them during the election in order to advance his/her political goals. It guarantees to favor all who arrive from such an individuality in in addition to highlighting that individuality. People of multiple identities would not gain from such a strategy when he is voted into power and keeps his commitment.. Second, populism underscores the quality of the work plan debate. Voting is a platform for different factions to start competing for social influences through offering the best work strategy to help sectors of society that are still suffering from a lack. Third, populism splits instead of integrates civilization. People believe that about there individuality has been characterized by choice of a "greatest" masterpieces which will resolve issues in there own area. Finally, Populism seems to be widely misunderstood as a subset of real politics, or even an outlet of state politics. Undoubtedly, a members of the group become much more able to unite once those who have a common identity. Nevertheless, in the sense of a multiculturalism Indonesian national identity, trying to emphasize this same identity of such a dominant group could really represent a threat to the country's integrity and harmony. This illustrates the dividing line among racial politics and politics in general: it only aims to achieve an exclusive objectives of its particular group, while the other aims to achieve encompassing targets for shared life whilst also trying to destroy those certain identities.

The emergence of ghost voters

The 'ghost voter' strategy is a means of vastly increased ballots by utilizing the identities of dead person as electors. Because of number of registered voters have to be massive, as well as because utilizing the deceased's identity in any name is illegal, political pilots are really not frightened to use the identity. Those who used data from Provincial and district to publicize the names of the deceased as voters. Given that there is a list of the names of people who died as voters and were not likely to vote in elections, this politics is also known as 'ghost voter' politics. The Indonesian Institute of Sciences "LIPI" (2013) published reliable data on ghost voters in Indonesia. According to the LIPI study, there is a significant rise with in Population Data of Potential Election Voters (DP4) as well as the Data of Permanent Voters (DPT), which is main reason for the large non - attendance rate. It thus implies that ghost voters are very much likely to contribute to the massive amount of crossbenchers. For example, as in West Java vote, the census inhabitants of West Java is 43 million, whilst statistics from General Election Commission (KPU) using data from the Population Aggregate List per District (DAK2) in West Java is 49 million. As a result, the population information stored by the Central Statistics Agency differs by approximately 6 million. Comparable disparities emerged in North Sumatra, at which DAK2 and BPS vary by 3 million people, and Central Java, where the difference is seven million. Ghost voters are predicted to rise in the general election in 2024 as inhabitants in certain regions have been preoccupied with death certificates (Mildaniati, 2022).

Utilizing dead people's information in elections is a serious crime of misrepresenting population information as well as population records. Falsification of residential documents, for instance, can indeed be punished by:

1. Article 93: Any resident who intentionally falsifies letters and/or documents to the Implementing Agency in reporting Population Events and Important Events faces up to 6 (six) years in prison and/or a fine of IDR. 50 million.
2. Article 94: Anyone who orders, facilitates, or manipulates Population Data and/or Population Data Elements as defined in Article 77 is subject to a maximum prison sentence of 6 (six) years and/or a maximum fine of IDR. 75,000,000. 00. (seventy five million rupiah).
3. Article 96A: Any person or legal entity who does not have the right to print, publish, and/or distribute the Population Documents referred to in Article 8 paragraph (1) letter c shall be sentenced to ten (ten) years in prison and a fine of IDR. 1,000,000.000,00. (one billion rupiah).

Despite the framework which regulates the legal settlement of general election infringements, the police and prosecutor's office for criminal violations, and the General Election Supervisory Body (BAWASLU) for election disputes, there are numerous barriers in law enforcement. For example, the reporting deadline for a violation is indeed very short, 7 (seven) days after it was discovered. Furthermore, Bawaslu was granted so little time to act on the report, where it made collecting proof complicated.

Even though settlement time in Law 7 to cope with infringements of 7+7 is not in line with the settlement time in the Pilkada Law (Election of Regents, Mayors, and Governors), a further issue is the absence of General Election Supervisory Body (BAWASLU) authority to resurrect parties suspected of having committed crimes. If the matter desires to flee while in an investigation, there is nothing that could be done to halt the case since time runs out in the process of dealing with it, as well as other obstacles that keep recurring in its implementation. Law enforcement should indeed achieve a legal advancement in settling both criminal and administrative instances.

Political fraud and violations of human rights

The voting rights has been institutionalized in many statutory provisions, including Convention On human Rights (UDHR), the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the 1945 Basic law, and Human Rights Law No. 39 of 1999. The above four documents rule the country national elections in Indonesia, each of which authorize inclusion of political freedoms, fairness in electoral engagement, as well as cast a ballot confidentiality assurances.

Among the pillars of contemporary democratic governance is indeed the fundamental premise of global and equatable voting rights for any and all eligible voters. The significance of inclusion and diversity, pluralism, and inclusivity has been stressed through Article 25(b) of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, that acknowledges every citizen's right to vote and be elected at genuine periodic elections by universal and equal suffrage.

Cronyism of Pork Barrels or money politics, ghost voters, and demagoguery make the election a breeding place for violations of human rights. The voices of the people is suppressed, and it becomes a bargaining chip. Since they have freely subverted one's rights for particular political desires, these strategies would then make it more difficult for electors should choose. The concept of holding direct, public, accessible, and confidential election process (LUBER) can also be managed to negotiate, whether it's with cash or even other conditions that affect voting' freedom to choose his\her political choice.

Although Indonesia does have representative government, there have been a few downfalls in regards to basic freedoms. The country of participatory democracy and also the accomplishment of right to vote in Indonesia appears to somehow be catastrophic. Its political and legal battlegrounds' accessibility to discourse on human rights has had no genuine influence on community fundamental freedoms. Instead of actually implementing civil rights, all of this finally accepted them as a political tactic.

CONCLUSION

Electoral forgery in Indonesian elections was indeed divided into three categories identity politics, pork barrel, as well as ghost voters. The three kinds of fraud have become an acts to influence individual potentials in elections as well as accomplish political motivation there next to election participation, which results in an infringement of political freedoms. Any such political platform increases the level of political turmoil and violates people's voting privileges. Acts of forgery have all been deemed infringements of political and civil rights since there are constraints on casting ballots for candidates or going to vote directly, publicly, freely, and confidentially, as endorsed by Indonesia's electoral doctrine. Political groups play a distinct role through achieving the nation's targets than nation's public positions. With their legitimate interests, instinctual preferences are employed to keep moving the tires of authorities. Particular preferences are indeed the main and quite often overlooked aspirations of people.
